Press release from: Doglover.biz

"The leading dating site for dog lovers – doglovers.biz has added another string to Cupid's Bow!" So says Doglover.biz founder Derek Collinson today. "Our members can already find matches by lots of different criteria including their favourite dog breed but we thought we'd give them a little more help to find their soul mates by using star signs." "And we believe we've found the best Astrologer in the business to provide this extra help in the form of "astrologer royal" Russell Grant who in 1978 made history being the first person in 300 years to publicly give an astrological consultation to the British Royal Family."

"Apart from providing daily horoscopes and weekly petscopes so our members can find out what the stars have in store for them and their dogs Russell reveals how the stars and planets can help them find their ideal partner and what they can tell them about their work, career and future.

" Russell says" Astrology can open our eyes to our own true inner potential and by harnessing the power of the planets and the insights they can give us we can make the most of our future."

"Derek says" I am delighted that one of the world's leading Astrologers will be providing another string to Cupid's bow on Doglover.biz. For many of our members the name Russell Grant is probably the first name that comes to mind when they think of Astrology - such is the reputation of this lovable man who has endeared himself to a worldwide audience on the many occasions he has appeared in the media. Perhaps though few people would appreciate just how remarkable Russell's life has been so take a look at his bio and prepare to be wowed by a star of stage and screen and probably the brightest star of Astrology today."

Russell Grant's Bio

Born in Hillingdon, Middlesex and raised in the world famous heart hospital village, Harefield at 12 years old he landed the first of many roles on television, ranging from the BBC's Wednesday Play and classics such as the Canterbury tales to popular sitcoms such as The Doctor Series, On the Buses and Please Sir. Whilst performing on stage and in studio Russell was a gifted psychic and was studying astrology through Rita Szymanski, the then treasurer of the Astrological Lodge of Great Britain.

A few years later Russell was "on the boards" at the London Palladium with Tommy Steele and elected President of the British Astrological Psychic Society. His work brought him close friendships with psychic superstar, Doris Stokes and many famous and powerful people all over the world.

In 1978 Russell made history. He was presented in public, to Her Majesty the Queen Mother, Lord and Lady Rothermere and Sir David English. He was dubbed "Astrologer Royal" by the media, a name that has stuck, as he was the first person in 300 years to publicly give an astrological consultation to the British royal family.

In that same year Russell's rise to fame was meteoric. He syndicated his stars column to over 450 newspapers world-wide and was signed by Granada Television to become the first daytime astrologer ever in British ITV on an afternoon show called Live from Two.

1983 brought more recognition and ground breaking television for Russell when he became one of the original presenters of breakfast television. Staying with the BBC on Breakfast Time for five years before moving to TV AM at ITV for another four years.

During this time he had several best-selling books on astrology including: Russell Grant's Sun Signs, Russell Grant's Dream Dictionary, Russell Grant's Astro Tarot Pack and Russell Grant's Book of Birthdays.

He presented the daily show and the BBC 1 network series Russell in New York. A lifestyle programme on the Big Apple, this led to working for Fox television for nearly two years.

At the same time, Russell was asked to join Granada and Richard Madeley and Judy Finnegan on This Morning and live in New York with a new US television programme called, ironically, Breakfast Time. He accepted both, flying regularly between the UK and US.

It was in 1994 he fronted his own ITV network show Russell Grant's All Star Show clocking up the best afternoon audiences of all time.

In the same year Russell was signed up by America Online, the major internet server, Russell's stars became a hit across the Internet with Britons and Americans alike flocking to read his stars. His Web site www.russellgrant.com currently attracts up to ten million visitors each and every month while over 100,000 people get their daily horoscopes delivered by e-mail direct to their computer desktops from Russell.

Russell's stars can now be found on all the UK's Internet Service Providers and search engines including Handbag, MSN as well as on the major search engines, Tiscali, IT Marketplace and many, many more web sites and digital TV platforms. Recently Russell moved into the text message area to spread his forecasts even further afield; working with partners such as Vodafone, Orange, O2 and T-Mobile and there's lots more in the pipeline!

In January 2006 Russell's latest book "You Can Change Your Life" was published by Random House and is already exceeding expectations. With over 45,000 copies being ordered by a major supermarket chain the book is already scaling the Best Sellers List.

Russell was recently engaged in ITV's Celebrity Fit Club where he observed the rigorous regimen laid down by the experts and has embarked upon a structured programme of exercise. He is achieving the weight loss targets laid down by the show and he was greatly encouraged by the many hundreds of letters and e-mails of encouragement and support he has received.

Russell continues to make regular TV and radio appearances and has recently launched his own IPTV channel www.starchannel.tv.

Dog lovers get their very own dating and social network because www.doglover.biz offers people who love dogs an opportunity to meet online. And from around the world provides breaking news, entertaining stories and the latest information about dating and dogs.

www.doglover.biz founder, Derek Collinson said "Only dog lovers really understand what it's like to love dogs and it's important for them to be able to share that passion with the person they love and their friends. Although there are many dating sites out there the chances of finding a fellow dog lover they like are pretty slim!"

Basic membership is completely free. In addition anyone now automatically receive a free 7 day trial of the Premium

Membership. Once registered, dog lovers can enjoy matchmaking and social network tools such as Mail Match, Forums, Blogs, Chat rooms, Instant Messenger and Audio, Photo and Video upload. In addition they will be able to download a free ebook about how to find the "right one" online and find dog and dating related products and services in an extensive suppliers' directory. In addition members can get advice from experts in dating, dog health, dog behaviour and dog communication. Dogs too benefit in two ways. Firstly 20% of revenues is donated to dog charities and rescue shelters and secondly members can adopt dogs featured in the dog rescue forum and the many dog rescue shelters featured in the directory.

Born in Scotland but now living in the Yorkshire Wolds, Derek Collinson and his wife Jan, enjoy the company of Findlay (A Spinone), Florence and Serena (a Pointer and a Labrador/Cocker Spaniel cross) both rescue dogs from Limerick Animal Welfare. Derek looks forward to welcoming all dog lovers to www.doglover.biz. "All dog lovers are invited to join us here and you don't have to own a dog just love them."
