Los Angeles California, April 28, 2007 - Rugged Notebooks, Inc., a leader in the specialized technical field of "extreme", or rugged computers, announced this week the launch of a new business blog designed to be an online resource for end users.

The blog mirrors the company website name as "The Rugged Notebooks Blog", domain name: www.RuggedNotebooksBlog.com. President and CEO, Alan Shad said, "We are very pleased to be the first in this highly competitive niche market to provide a company sponsored weblog as an online resource."

The trend of business blogs presents an exciting opportunity for "Rugged Notebooks" to share with new customers and past clients, ideas, feedback, and comments about products, product updates, and product innovations.

The blog will feature unbiased reviews with competitive products, industry news, and online resource information applicable to the following business segments: Industrial / DOD / Public Safety / Aviation / Petroleum / Marine / Mining / Manufacturing / Telecommunications / Remote and Virtual Office.

Designed for extreme durability in harsh conditions, the Rugged Notebooks, Inc. product line is also known for its outdoor "Sunlight Readable-Touch Screen" LCD. The Rugged Notebooks product line includes: Ruggedized Laptops, Handheld Computers, PDAs, Mobile Data Terminals, and Wireless Tablets, all of which are rated at 10,000+ hours MTBF (Mean Time Between Failure), double the industry standard.

Rugged Notebooks, Inc. has been featured on CNN and leading industry publications, including "Wired Magazine" and "Laptop Magazine".
