TORONTO, Canada March 2008 – Commodity Trading Advisor, Genuine Trading Solutions, a registered CTA with the CFTC, Commodity Futures Trading Commission says the role today of a CTA is constantly evolving.

Dwayne Strocen, President of Genuine Trading Solutions says once upon a time a Commodity Trading Advisor was content to be known as a Portfolio Manager trading commodities and futures for a managed futures fund. As today's investor becomes more sophisticated and today's selection of investment products becomes ever more complex and varied, the need for the CTA to diversify becomes more acute.

So what exactly is the role of today's CTA. Certainly trading of derivative products for a managed futures fund continues to be as important as before. A CTA has also become more involved with derivative analytics. This role is essentially focused upon becoming an analyst to structure and analyze the more multifaceted requirements demanded by hedge funds, pension funds and structured products.

The use of derivative analytics to manage the adverse risk of an equity or bond portfolio brought about by adverse market conditions is critical in preserving asset growth. The uses of hedging to prevent volatility has long been understood by the largest institutions but is now available to the smaller sized company and to the individual investor. No doubt as products continue to evolve so to will the CTA evolve to meet the need of today's professional money manager.

Genuine Trading Solutions President, Dwayne Strocen says he is pleased at the attention given to today's Commodity Trading Advisor in the ever changing market climate of complex investment products. We are thrilled to be part of this exciting environment.

Genuine Trading Solutions is duly registered with the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, CFTC as a Commodity

Trading Advisor ("CTA"). Our business objective is to analyze and implement a hedging strategy designed to reduce exposures brought about by operational or market risk. This is done by using the futures market to hedge exposure to Interest Rates, Indices, Currency and base commodities. We also have considerable experience in the energy sector with energy based products.

Our clients are hedge funds, mutual funds, pension funds, endowments, corporations, trusts and select individual investors. Our services as a CTA are most often requested to reduce or manage adverse circumstances brought about by economic or market driven events.

Genuine Trading Solutions also provides complete Risk Management services for commodity basis hedging and trading on all worldwide exchanges as required. CTA services also include the operation and management of a Managed Futures Fund. Additional information is provided upon request.
