Coastal Vacations announced the dates and location for their worldwide membership conference this fall. The top rated home based business is expected to set a new record for attendance on September 1, 2, and 3 at the Gaylord Palms Resort in Kissimmee Florida. The conference dates will coincide with the observance of the Labor Day weekend in the United states.

The eleven-year-old home based business is flying higher than ever with record sales posted last year, and a new attendance record set at their recently concluded spring conference. That conference was held at Disney's Contemporary Resort, but there were questions about them being able to accommodate the growing group this fall.

There are two reasons for the recent explosive growth of Coastal Vacations. The high value travel products they offer are in high demand and the emergence of their fastest growing group has given new members a much higher than average success rate than previously experienced in the home based business arena.

Coastal Vacations occupies a unique niche in the travel industry. Members can book luxury condo stays usually reserved for timeshare owners, but Coastal does not sell timeshares. Members can also book complimentary vacations and cruises, but associates are not travel agents. While airlines have filed for bankruptcy protection, and mom and pop travel agencies are going out of business, Coastal associates increased their average profit per sale in 2005.

For over a year now, the Coastal Vacations Sales Center has made this home based business user friendly to non sales types. They are the fastest growing group within the Coastal program, and their business model is fully explained at www.coastalpassiveincome.com. Questions about the business model are answered on four live conference calls each week. Call information can also be found at the website.

The Sales Center utilizes a user friendly selling system to market travel memberships that have been offered by Coastal Vacations for 11 years. They are uniquely positioned to benefit from three huge ongoing worldwide trends. They are capitalizing on the double digit growth of the largest industry in the world--travel and tourism. As a top rated home based business in the travel industry, they are positioned to continue to benefit from the current home based business revolution. The nature and quality of their products, and the stability of 11 years in business appeal to a large segment of our population that is nearing retirement age.

Coastal Vacations Director Dean Marino hosts Discovery Conference Calls and live training calls for the Sales Center. He also co-hosted podcast segments that originated from the floor of the spring conference where he interviewed several of the speakers and shared information with members unable to make the pilgrimage to Florida. He urges not only members, but those considering a career with Coastal Vacations to get to the September conference.
